Feedback from Bon Berger International, the Netherlands

Liliane Kilunga

I think communication is important to resolve any problem. If there is not intense communication between two parties, things will not be easy even if each party has the ability to fulfill his duty. With intense communication, both parties will know what is expected of one another. If every one of us can realize that we are all world citizens, that all global issues are important to understand, and that it is everyone’s responsibility to contribute, then there would be no issues.

About New Rules: it is better to work on confidentiality because without confidentiality there is no innovation. The two parties working together have to trust one another. This will come with good communication. Together we are strong. But the most important thing for each party to know is that we are working toward a common goal.